Fraser Guidelines

To be deemed “Fraser competent” a young person must be capable of making a reasonable assessment of the advantages and disadvantages of the treatment proposed, so consent, if given, can be properly and fairly described as true consent. Fraser Guidelines apply specifically to the provision of sexual health and contraception services to those under 16, the five principles of a Fraser assessment are:

1. The young person understands the advice being given.
2. The young person does not want to involve parents/carers or allow the professional to do so on their behalf.
3. It is likely that the young person will begin or continue having sex with or without treatment/contraception.
4. Unless they receive treatment/contraception their physical or mental health (or both) is likely to suffer
5. It is in the young person’s best interests to give contraceptive advice, treatment or supplies without parental consent.

If safeguarding concerns are identified escalation and referral should be made in accordance with the safeguarding policy of the registering professional’s organisation
